About the Presenter: Michael A. Matthay, MD, is a professor of medicine and anesthesia at the University of California at San Francisco and a UCSF Cardiovascular Research Institute senior associate. He is associate director of critical care medicine. He received his bachelor’s degree from Harvard University and his medical doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine. He received an American Thoracic Society award for Scientific Achievement in 2002 and the UCSF Award for Outstanding Clinical Research in 2006, as well as UCSF’s Lifetime Achievement Award in Mentoring in 2013, the American Lung Association Trudeau Medal for Research in 2014. His basic research has focused on mechanisms of salt, water and protein transport across the alveolar epithelium that account for the resolution of pulmonary edema. He has also studied the pathogenesis and resolution of pulmonary edema and acute respiratory distress syndrome (ARDS). His recent research also has focused on the biology and potential clinical use of allogeneic bone marrow derived mesenchymal stromal (stem) cells for ARDS. He has been the principal investigator on several NIH/NHLBI clinical trials from 1995 through 2024.
