ID Faculty Candidate Lecture

“The Role of the ID Provider during the Opiate Abuse Epidemic”

Matt Adams, DO
Fellow, Infectious Diseases,
University of Arizona, Tucson, AZ

Wednesday, October 30, 2019
11:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.
COM-T Room 6120

Dr. Adams is an Arizona native who attended college at Arizona State University. There he studied psychology and began work in a neuroscience lab with a focus on drug addiction. After spending a significant amount of time in a basement with lab rats he started his medical training in Glendale, Arizona at Midwestern University. Following this he completed his internal medicine residency here in Tucson at the University of Arizona where he is currently an infectious disease fellow in his second year of training.

This University of Arizona event is sponsored by the Division of Infectious Diseases, Department of Medicine, UA College of Medicine - Tucson. It is open to the public, particularly community physicians and other interested health-care professionals.

CONTACT: Stephanie Abalos, (520) 626-6887 or stephanie.abalos@bannerhealth.com