About the Presenter: Anna Suk-Fong Lok, MD, is director of clinical hepatology and assistant dean for clinical research at the University of Michigan Medical School. She also is the Alice Lohrman Andrews Research Professor of Hepatology in the Department of Internal Medicine. In 2019, she was bestowed the honor of also being named the Dame Sheila Sherlock Distinguished University Professor of Hepatology and Internal Medicine, after her mentor with whom she trained while at the Royal Free Hospital of London after earning her medical degree from the University of Hong Kong. She moved to the U.S. in 1992 from Hong Kong. Dr. Lok was elected to the National Academy of Medicine in 2022. She has published more than 600 papers on viral hepatitis and liver disease and is co-author of five editions of the American Association for the Study of Liver Diseases Association Guidelines. She was president of the association in 2017. Her research focuses on the natural history and treatment of hepatitis B and C, and the prevention of liver cancer.
