

THE UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA
COLLEGE OF MEDICINE TUCSON

Department of Medicine

Dear DOM Faculty & Staff:

Please join us this Wednesday for our Medicine Grand Rounds lecture featuring David Feller-Kopman, MD, FCCP, chief of the Division of Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center and professor of medicine at Dartmouth University's Geisel School of Medicine. He'll be speaking on:

"State of the Art in Lung Cancer:
Perspectives of an Interventional
Pulmonologist"

*Wednesday, March 13, Noon-1 p.m.
Lecture Hall, Room 5403
College of Medicine – Tucson*

—Lunch will be served—

Please clear some space in your schedule to attend. We would like to fill as many seats as possible for this captivating lecture.

If you can't attend directly, please join us via Zoom at:

His research focuses on the physiology of the pleural space and minimally invasive treatment of patients with malignant pleural effusion. He co-founded the Interventional Pulmonary Outcomes Group (IPOG) whose mission is to provide and support multicenter prospective trials in the interventional pulmonary space. He's also involved with several projects investigating minimally invasive ways to diagnose and treat lung cancer.
